The communications world is furthering quickly and for publishers is a raison d'être. Tend because research production has to be clearly and accurately disseminated and must keep complying the content quality standards, editorial quality, visibility, among others, allowing us to be recognized and the knowledge being constantly in motion.

In that sense, CIVILIZAR Ciencias Sociales y Humanas journal is presently in a fit process of a new and more dynamic website. Two sites can be find, one in English and another in French, and we are implementing the use of the OJS system, a Public Knowledge Project's initiative for content and editorial management of the journal.

We are on the learning curve; aiming to incorporate new information and communication technologies in order to expand the possibilities of social development and contribute to the dissemination of scientific knowledge of national and international quality and remains as it has been our editorial policy.
